

NATASHA SISTRUNK ROBINSON

Mentor for Life: Finding Purpose through Intentional Discipleship offers a communal, relational, holistic, theological, practical, and progressive framework for mentoring as intentional discipleship.

Mentoring Framework

1. Knowing & Loving God
2. Understanding Your Identity in Christ Jesus
3. Loving Your Neighbor as Yourself

#Mentor4Life

“Mentoring as intentional discipleship is also about investing in the priorities of God’s kingdom and in the lives of other people. It is an intentional approach to discipleship that is progressive first, by inspiring mentees to know and love God; second, by helping mentees understand who they are in Christ; and finally, by encouraging mentees to love their neighbors as they love themselves. This progressive mentoring framework places the whole gospel at center stage and reminds us that the church’s most crucial mission is making disciples, which is a serious responsibility for every believer.” – Natasha Sistrunk Robinson, Author
